A photographic guide showing what to expect from your visit to Turner's House.

Traveling to Turner's house is easy, though may be noisy.

Front Door

When you go into Turner's House, you need to turn left and go through the door on your right to get to the front desk. The corridors in the house are narrow, so you might have to wait for other people to move.
There is always someone at the front desk. They work for Turner’s House and can help you if you have a question or a problem. Everyone who works at Turner’s House wears a badge on an orange lanyard.

Front Desk

The sitting room is the biggest room in the house.

Sitting Room  Ship Models
The dining room is where Turner's and his friends would have dinner. If you turn the key in the clock it starts making a ticking noise, noises of people eating and tells stories about people who visited Turner.

Dining Room  Clock with soundscape

The small parlour has more paintings in it. It also has an image on the window which shows what it looked like outside when Turner lived here.

Small Parlour  Landscape Window
Be careful on the stairs, they are very narrow. If someone is on their way up you will have to wait for them. Stairs going down.

The kitchen is where Turner’s dad spent a lot of his time. He cooked and looked after the house. If you wave your hand over the tankard a shadow of ‘Old Dad’ appears on the wall and it tells you about him.
The main staircase is very beautiful. Be careful not to touch the walls as they are specially painted to look like marble. Stairs going up.

Turner's bedroom is where Turner slept and has a telescope with a view of what Turner would have seen from his bedroom window.

Turner’s bedroom  Telescope
The small bedroom has information about the restoration of the house.

Small bedroom

On the ground floor is a toilet for males and females. It is also designed for people who need wheelchairs. If you would like to buy anything, we have things for sale by the front desk.

Toilet  Shop items